I am dismayed by the suggestion that there could be a tax on shares.
NZ needs more risk capital to grow our country and employment.
To tax the gains on this risk capital will make it akin to investing in a no risk investment and so severely reduce the incentive to invest in risky ventures and so reduce our ability to grow.
Investments in shares ultimately mean that the investor receives income if/when the investment is successful and at this point it is taxed at his/her marginal tax rate, The crown gets there money and the country gets it's risk capital.
The group needs to drop this consideration that there could be a tax on shares.
